Middlebury College–CMRS Oxford Humanities Program

The Middlebury College-CMRS Oxford Humanities Program offers a unique study abroad experience within the historic city of Oxford. The program occupies St. Michael's Hall, a 19th-century building in the center of Oxford, within a few minutes' walk of all facilities.

The program's long-term association with Keble College provides multiple opportunities for students to engage in Oxford's social and cultural environment. Middlebury-CMRS students are Associate Members of Keble, one of Oxford's largest colleges, which is only a short walk from St. Michael's Hall. Through Keble, students can take meals in the dining hall, relax in the cafe or common room, study in the Victorian library, join Keble clubs and participate in a range of sports. Middlebury-CMRS students also have access to Oxford's Bodleian Library, as well as opportunities to join university-wide student associations. Throughout the semester, students can attend local events, museums, concerts, and theatrical performances, in order to take full advantage of this culturally vibrant city.

While the courses focus on the humanities, covering all periods and a wide selection of topics, the program welcomes students from all academic disciplines. Students enroll in a research course, a readings seminar, and two individual tutorials.
